Discerning travelers seeking eco-chic luxury know where to stay when they visit Boston: The Lenox Hotel. For the past 15 years and long before “green” was a buzzword, The Lenox has been paving the way as an environmental pioneer in the hospitality industry. Providing accommodations of distinction, The Lenox Hotel presents the perfect complement of Old World charm and modern technology and blends impeccable service, world-class cuisine and thoughtful amenities to bring historic character to its guests. Ideally situated in the heart of America’s favorite walking city, it is surrounded by world-class shopping, dining and cultural attractions.

Why GreenTown? Owned by the third generation of a local family, this historic landmark hotel raises the bar on green travel, and the Saunders family has often been credited with leading the urban ecotourism movement. It was one of the first hotels in the world to offset carbon emissions from 100 percent of its electricity use. While maintaining premiere levels of comfort and service for its guests, The Lenox conserves significant natural resources, minimizes chemicals and waste, and improves air and water quality on its property and in its community. It boasts plaques in every guest room to share eco-facts on electricity efficiency, water conservation and recycling. Last year, it was the only urban hotel in the world to make it on to Conde Nast Traveler’s prestigious Green List. For more info visit <http://www.lenoxhotel.com>
